Re: United States v. Wayne Ruoho
Case No. 07-cr-118-bbc

Dear Judge Crabb:

In my haste to prepare a reply brief yesterday, I repeatedly used a rough estimate to discuss how long Mr. Ruoho has served in prison: about 12 years. Today, it occurred to me that the Court would benefit from a more precise number.

Mr. Ruoho has spent 153 months in custody. (He was in custody 7/23/07–9/7/07 (46 days), and then 10/26/07–present (12 years, 7 months, 16 days). See PSR. This is a total of 12 years, 9 months, 2 days, which I round down slightly to 153 months.)

With earned good time (that results in a 15% reduction in sentence), 153 months of custody results from a 180-month imposed sentence. The probation office reports that Mr. Ruoho has earned all but 34 days of good time. Therefore, Mr. Ruoho has served what would be an imposed sentence of just about 179 months—just shy of 15 years.

Therefore, in considering whether the time that Mr. Ruoho has already served is sufficient to hold him accountable for his federal offense and meet the other goals of sentencing, this Court is effectively considering a 179-month imposed sentence.

Sincerely,
